

In a desperate attempt to persuade the American people that the terrible ObamaCare law is somehow good for you, the Obama Administration is now using your tax dollars to make misleading commercials. I have already seen the ad below on TV several times. Maybe you have too. Notice that it really gives you no information, but merely tells you how much you are going to like the changes made in the new health care law. And, of course, this ad is running, not coincidentally, just days before an election.

This is wrong on so many levels; not the least of which is the fact that taxpayer dollars were used to pay for these commercials. By the way, the Obama Administration has spent $3 million thus far, all of which is borrowed, on ads touting the health care law.

Take a look and see what you think:
